

Clutch

Interview with M. Chuprinski Magora Systems

Our director of business development, Mikhail Chuprinsky, has been interviewed by Clutch, one of the leading portals for digital outreach and design. Clutch is a meeting place, where bespoke software, web and app developer companies unite with business owners, investors and general managers from the private sector to create a long and stable relations.

Mikhail gave a brief history of our company, Magora Systems, offered some recommendations for choosing a reliable partner and highlighted future perspectives of both the mobile app industry and Magora. Mikhail further explained the basic principles of our work: understanding business value, trust and cooperation with customers to achieve the effective solutions each client's company needs.

In the interview, Mikhail also answered the questions :

- How does the Magora business model and project management generate value for our clients?
- What defines a successful project?
- Can you give us a case study or a success story?

You can read the full interview at <https://clutch.co/app-developers/interview-magora-systems>